climate

The Grand Duchy of Luxembourg enjoys a temperate climate without extremes. It profits from the beneficial and moderating influence of the sea, but the sea winds (SW and NW) shed a great part of their moisture before reaching the Luxembourg frontiers. Most of the tourist areas are well sheltered from cold winds. The period from May to mid-October is particularly suitable for vacations. While July and August are the warmest, May and June are the sunniest months. September and October often offer an "Indian Summer". The heights of the Ardennes assure excellent air cures. The valleys of the Our, the Haute-Sûre, the Moselle and the "Good Land" are particularly recommended for vacations of relaxation. Hours of sunshine: 1535 (average for 1958-1975). During the season summer clothes may be worn, with good shoes for the many hikes and, as a precaution, a raincoat, sweater or other woolens.
